New Fire Plow For County

The Virginia Division of Forestry has assigned this John Deere tractor and fire plow to Appomattox County as a part of its expanding services to landowners. The John Deere 420 has its own truck-carrier and will be "on the ready" for any fire calls in the area, according to Warren Taylor, county forester (right) and chief fire warden David Smith (left). Heretofore, fire fighters had to call for a fire plow from another county or use hand rakes or other substitutes. Forester Taylor said Monday, "This fire plow in no way replaces the fine volunteer local fire wardens throughout the county. It's a supplement to the good service they are already giving."
